Table for Discussion a Double agents project

For the Double agents exhibition 'The Trouble with Talkies' (London, 2005) a table and set of stools and benches were designed and built to act as a focal point for the issue of the journal '1+1+1' published to accompany the show.

The furniture then continued to be used in other contexts and acted as a premise or platform for a certain kind of focused discussion, and a certain kind of thinking.

This furniture has been made from the same designs which are available to download from the Double agents website:

www.doubleagents.org.uk

Anyone wishing to build the furniture to serve any purpose similar to or related to its previous uses, described on the website, is invited to do so. There are only three provisos:

1. That the design is followed absolutely and in every detail.

2. That the label (available here to downloaded) is printed out no smaller than A5 and attached to the underside of each piece of furniture.

3. That at least one photograph is taken of the furniture in situ, and possibly in use, and sent with a description, to doubleagents@csm.arts.ac.uk, with 'Table for discussion' in the subject line.

© Double agents www.doubleagents.org.uk